

RULES OF CONDUCT

The location you have chosen to celebrate your marriage is a marvellous union of art, culture and beauty and is part of everyone's important heritage. For this reason, there are a few simple rules to follow that allow this heritage to be protected and remain available to everyone in the future, in respect of these places' conservation, integrity, cleanness and dignity.

The ornamental walls and the monumental furniture are part of the beauty and charm of these locations, so we ask that they remain protected from improper use and behaviour which could alter the balance of the environment.

Existing signs and signposting facilitate orientation within the building and it is important that they remain in their original location; in the same way access and escape routes have to remain accessible to allow ordinary activities to be carried out and to ensure the greatest possible safety.